

I'm disappointed by Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to push member stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. While I typically am in favor of less regulation. This action by a major corporation very much concerns me.

We must guard our democracy from corruption. To me this is a blatant attempt by a corporation to change an election in their favor leveraging public airways that they receive free of charge. This is not in the public interest. It's fine for each campaign to pay for their advertising but this is unacceptable.

If this is the future, then reluctantly I think that we have to strengthen our media ownership rules to prevent these types of abuses.

Thanks, Corey
